

Platinum Sponsor

A quick recap of the evening: Nick Foley on what video games teach us about human connection in an AI world, and a pre-recorded Q&A between Longcloud's Paul Singh and Trent Montgomery, Managing Director of TDM Transport. Scan either code below to go deeper.

1 The Q&A PAUL SINGH × TRENT MONTGOMERY

TDM TRANSPORT · WAIKATO, NZ

Less admin, more road

Paul spoke with TDM's Managing Director Trent Montgomery about the real-time platform Longcloud built for the Waikato logistics leader: an office portal and a mobile driver app running on one shared database. Dispatch, jobs, CRM, fleet, maintenance and reporting now live in one place, while drivers see their runs, snap photo proof of pickup and delivery, and message the office as jobs happen. Vehicle compliance is tracked automatically, so nothing slips through the cracks. Rather than waiting for the pains of scale to bite, Trent invested early, laying the foundation for AI-assisted scheduling, route optimisation and smarter operations as TDM keeps growing.

Office portal + driver app

Real-time sync

Automated compliance

Want to know more?

Read the full case study. Scan the code or visit:

longcloud.nz/our-work/tdm-transport-fleet-dispatch-portal

2 The Talk

NICK FOLEY · LONGCLOUD

Small country, big leverage

Nick takes a look at the New Zealand video game industry: the studios, the talent and the stories being built right here, and what it tells us about creativity, community and human connection in a world increasingly shaped by AI. He digs into the missed opportunities too, and how, by harnessing collaboration and our unique culture, we can establish ourselves as a world leader in the industry. Oh, and Nick even had our AV guy, Rob, play a game live in front of the audience, one Nick had built himself ahead of the event, for everyone's entertainment. You had to be there!

NZ video game industry

Creativity & connection

Live game demo

Read the slides

Scan to open Nick's full presentation, right in your browser. No download.

Thanks to our gold partners and event partners.
Without you, this event wouldn't have been a success, or even possible.

GOLD PARTNERS

EVENT PARTNERS

